

ATLANTIC COUNCIL AND MITRE PARTNER TO IMPROVE TRANSATLANTIC SECURITY

Combining their respective and complementary strengths, the Atlantic Council and the MITRE Corporation are partnering to foster collaboration on pivotal global security initiatives.

WHY THIS PARTNERSHIP IS NEEDED

The world is at an inflection point and the international rules-based order is under threat. Democracies need to develop innovative geopolitical solutions to empower decision makers, to ensure unified and effective integrated deterrence, and should deterrence fail, to defeat aggression. The new partnership aspires to support U.S. and allied strategies and policies, the cornerstone of strength for coming generations, to safeguard the transatlantic community and to enable the triumph of democratic principles.

“ This partnership is a powerful combination of MITRE’s technical prowess and the Atlantic Council’s strategic insight. Our mutually reinforcing strengths and shared commitment to a more secure world make this collaboration not just beneficial, but essential.”

— Dana (Keoki) Jackson, SC.D., Senior Vice President, General Manager, MITRE National Security

The partnership will leverage the Atlantic Council’s leading-edge incisive analysis and access to global decision makers alongside MITRE’s deep operational experience, technical skill, and modeling and simulation expertise to deliver data-driven, systems-thinking solutions enabling operational success. The Atlantic Council and MITRE will work together to better understand the current threat environment and propose new approaches to some of the toughest global security and civil challenges.

“ By working together, the Atlantic Council and MITRE can provide the innovative solutions needed to navigate the complex geopolitical landscape of the 21st century. Together, we can shape policies and strategies that ensure a free, secure, and prosperous world.”

— Matthew Kroenig, Vice President and Senior Director, Director of Studies, Scowcroft Center for Strategy and Security

MITRE and the Atlantic Council will undertake a series of collaborative projects, beginning with a NATO Force Mix Analysis to identify specific challenges, opportunities, and options for the U.S. and the Alliance. We will evaluate ways to harden the Alliance’s eastern flank, measure the value of multi-domain operations, and deter Russian aggression. The technical analysis will be conducted within the context of NATO’s strategic/geopolitical environment.

AC MISSION

The Atlantic Council provides an essential forum for navigating the dramatic economic and political changes defining the 21st century by informing and galvanizing its uniquely influential network of global leaders. The Council—through the papers it publishes, the ideas it generates, the future leaders it develops, and the communities it builds—shapes policy choices and strategies to create a more free, secure, and prosperous world.

MITRE MISSION

The mission of the MITRE Corporation is to solve problems for a safer world. MITRE applies systems thinking and advanced technology to address complex national and global problems, bringing an interdisciplinary perspective to research and development. It operates six federally funded R&D centers, MITRE Labs, and an independent research program.